Palestinian terrorists wielding what appear to be shoulder-fired missiles near Highway 6 – a critical Israeli transportation artery – are shown in alarming footage from approximately six months ago, exclusively obtained by Israel Hayom. The video, captured in the Nur a-Shams refugee camp, shows members of a terror group openly brandishing the weapons, raising significant security concerns about the presence of advanced weaponry in the West Bank.

The footage features Moatasem Al-Ali, commander of Fatah's Al-Aqsa Martyrs' Brigades in Tulkarm, handling what experts believe to be a shoulder-fired missile. Al-Ali was subsequently eliminated by the IDF in February, along with two other operatives. Defense experts have confirmed that this is part of a shoulder-fired missile, but it is unclear whether it is a complete missile or a container.

Yehoshua Kalisky, senior researcher at the Institute for National Security Studies, said, "Whether it's a complete missile or a container, this is proof that they are trying to get such a weapon. This is a significant risk. Unlike tanks and anti-tank missiles, if a light jeep protected by fire is hit by such a missile – it will be a catastrophe."
